National Newspaper Week... Vale Council Requests Grant Promised By Department

Newspaper editors aren't particularly addicted to talking about themselves — especially editors in small communities.

Aside from an occasional reminder when our readers lag too far in their subscription bills, we try to keep in the background. It is one of our faults.

But the week of October 1 to 9 has been designated as National Newspaper Week. It is a time when the public is reminded of the value of the newspaper.

Surprise Party Given For Mrs. D. Walker

The home of Mrs. W. Huntingford was recently the scene of a happy surprise party arranged by the members of the W. I. L. to honor Mrs. D. Walker, one of the members who is leaving to reside at Jasper.

Games and contests occupied the early part of the evening, and later an address of farewell was read to the honoree by Mrs. W. T. Bowdman, constituency convener, and Mrs. O. Hannah presented her with a silver plate and server as a token of appreciation of her services for the Institute.

The recipient replied in suitable terms and extended an invitation to all to visit her new home and the day was followed by the serving of a dainty lunch.

With the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" the party dispersed about midnight.

CANADA AT WAR

"THE ARMY"
By B.M.P.

The tour of Eastern Canada arranged by the Department of National Defence for the general public, while covering every branch of Canada's war enterprise, concentrated especially on the Army.

We visited the Basic Training Centre at Brantford, the Army Trades School at Hamilton, the General Motors program for young vehicle men near Oshawa, the great military encampments and Advanced Training Centres at Camp Borden, Petawawa, Valcartier and Debert, and the Officers' Training Centre at Brockville.

We saw the new recruits in only a few days' training in army life behind him and the young soldier-student being taught the art of a skilled tradesman. We were impressed with the fact that the classroom plays fully as important a part in this war as does the drill hall and the rifle range, while the great army of instructors are performing a service almost as vital as that of officers on the battlefield. Later we came to the more advanced trainees engaged in rifle drill, machine-gun tactics, mortar-firing demonstrations and manoeuvres, going through their paces with machine-like precision. We were given every opportunity to talk with officers and men. Almost without exception we found them keenly interested in their work and eager to get on with the job of mastering the complicated arms and machines placed at their disposal.

Above all we were amazed at the tremendous hitting-power of the modern mechanized and swiftly-moving army. We had a preview of Canada's new war machines at the General Motors' proving ground in the wide of eastern Ontario, where speedy big buggies vied with trucks of armoured fighting vehicles and troop or load-carrying utility trucks for the honor of climbing the steepest hill or travelling over the roughest ground. Down the side of precipitous slopes, through deep gullies and over sharp projections in the landscape went the bouncing, bounding vehicles, surmounting every difficulty with apparent ease. It was not so easy on the drivers and crews, as some editors found to their sorrow when they essayed a ride in one of the new fighting machines. But it was a revelation of the progress made by Canada's motor industry in meeting the demands of modern war.

At Camp Borden we witnessed another demonstration of the mechanical prowess of Canada's army when we watched a motor company swing into action with its motorcycles, reconnaissance cars, universal carriers and utility trucks. Their skill in occupying a position and their apparent wealth of freepower were a revelation. At the same camp we viewed an impressive platoon attack on an "enemy" position, where machine guns and mortar fire were directed with a hail of metal and with smoke bombs providing a screen for the attack. At Borden is located the 5th Canadian (Armoured) Division under Major-General E. W. Sanson, D.S.O., who accompanied us on our tour of the camp. For training purposes a number of old United States tanks had been obtained and these were greatly in evidence during the afternoon. They have proved most useful in training personnel in driving and maintenance. With Canada's newly-equipped tank factories speeding up production, it will not be long before Canadian-made modern tanks will be available for this Division.

Camp Petawawa was famous in the last war for turning out some of the best artillerymen and engineers found in any army. It is fitting that in these days of mechanical warfare, Petawawa should again be the locale for training of Canada's artillery and engineering corps. The editors were treated to an astonishing display of gun drill by the young artillerymen, both on the 18-pounder and the new 25-pounder, which will soon be the standard equipment. A firing demonstration by two batteries of howitzers and 18-pounders out on the ranges, indicated that the Canadian gunners have lost none of the skill and accuracy possessed by their forebears. The engineers have an effective show in demolishing trees and a crossroads with high explosives, while a booby-trap comedy drama, proved a masterpiece.

An entire article could be devoted to that other great military camp at Debert in Nova Scotia. A year ago a wilderness, today a veritable city with 30 miles of roadways, 420 permanent and 82 temporary buildings, plus fire stations, banks, telegraph offices and all other requirements of a great army. It is recorded that authority was granted to construct Camp Debert on August 7th, 1940. The first battalions moved in the latter part of October and by Christmas there were 12,000 men housed in the camp. The forest had been cleared, roads built, water and power systems installed, and buildings erected, an achievement that constitutes a miracle of engineering

THEY'LL KEEP THE ARMY ROLLING

Gigantic Army Trade-Training Program Stands Behind Highly Mechanized Canadian Divisions

DRIVERS, MECHANICS AND TECHNICIANS FOR CANADA'S NEW SHOCK-ARMY BEING TURNED OUT AT RATE OF 20,000 A YEAR—INDUSTRIAL PLANTS AND TECHNICAL SCHOOLS GIVE AID.

BY KIM BEATTIE

When the Battle of France forced the realization that only British armies based on gasoline and speed could defeat Hitler's Wehrmacht, three major factors stood clear as necessities to the officers faced with the task of reorganizing and rebuilding the Canadian Army in the midst of war.

One, new tank units plus motoriza-tion of infantry, artillery and auxiliary troops. In other words complete mechanization behind an armoured spearhead. Two, swift reorganization of the existing training process to incorporate the new tactics. Three, creation of a great host of soldier-technicians tradesmen and mechanics to operate and maintain the fully mechanized army in the field.

As this writer will not tire of repeating, the three factors combined to produce one of the most appalling prospects ever to confront the Field Commanders and General Staff of a nation in peril. Only time, and the calm survey permitted by its distance will finally reveal the real enormity of the effort necessary to bring the Canadian army so far on the arduous road to re-creation as it is today.

STARTING TO ROLL

Civilian Canada is already aware, however, of tangible evidences of the historic military achievement carried out in the brief months since Lieut.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, the Corps Commander, and Major-Gen. H. D. G. Crear, the Chief of the General Staff, could seriously start the remodeling process. There is steadily increasing verification in the Canadian camps, training centres, testing grounds and war-plants, for the statement that new equipment is beginning to roll off the assembly lines, out of the arms and heavy-munition factories. Results are also everywhere visible of the interminable far-carried detail and staff-work which was necessary to transform the 1940 Canadian Army into a well-drilled, tightly interlaced war machine built upon the new tactical theories, weapons and formations.

The entire Canadian land-war organization, for instance, both overseas and at home, has been reformed, and is undergoing intensive training to the Army Plan which is calculated to defeat the mechanized Germans on any battlefield, which we—not Hitler—may choose. The Canadian Corps is constantly practicing air-land co-operation in its manoeuvres in England. Tanks are always the spearhead, with powerful motorized infantry driving the "victory" home. In Canada, the whole program motivating the army-in-training is based on blitz tactics and weapons leading to those large scale manoeuvres and thence to action.

NEW CONFIDENCE

Canada is obviously alert to her ownership of a new, powerful army, even if it is impossible for the public to appreciate the magnitude of the job that created it. As our strategists' far-seeing plan and intention gradually acquired tangible shape in the form of many tank units and a completely mechanized army, a new confidence in Canada's future on the battle-field began to grow up to keep pace with the mounting power and state of readiness of her land-arm. It is a justified faith. That the 1942 Canadian shock-trooper will have few peers in the open, hard-hitting warfare he will wage is one feature of our martial future about which Canadians can safely be complacent.

Further, Canada is now clearly close to possession of a modern military organization, equipped with the latest weapons and armoured fighting vehicles, which will pack extraordinary striking power—because it has the highest proportion of armoured to infantry troops of any army in the world! And that does not exclude the Germans, British or American Armies.

But what has been almost completely missed in Canada's watchful observance of her army's progress, is the gigantic trade-training structure which has been quietly and steadily erected behind the visible and splendid khaki facade.

MASS OF VEHICLES

As the new army expanded in manpower, its potential mass of vehicles automatically grew with it. Something tremendous and revolutionary in Canadian industrial education had to be quickly organized and launched if trained men were to keep pace with the machines.

This third major factor in the creation of the present army has no more importance than either new types of equipment or new tactical training. Just as a salient secret of a modern army's success is co-ordination, so is each dependent on the others. All are first requisites. None can be neglected. But the soldier-tradesman is more important to a wheeled army than is any foundation for a structure of steel and stone. For a mechanized force is not only built on its mechanics; they must operate it in the field—and then maintain it as it rolls. Or it will stop rolling, and nothing is quite so terrible as a bogged-down army, wheeled or any other kind.

MANY SPECIALISTS

When it became clear in the summer of 1940 that the new army would be comprised of between 18 per cent and 19 per cent soldier-tradesmen, that some corps would require more than 50 per cent specialists, and that all would need adequate replacements, it was also clear that the Army would have to create its own Directorate of Military Training (Col. J. K. Lawson, Director) at Defence Headquarters, Ottawa, immediately prepared to expand its minor trade-training section out of all former recognition. The important organization, which thus suddenly mushroomed into existence, was placed in charge of Lt.-Col. Spencer Ball.

This officer and his staff now stand behind a broad network of army trade-training schools which includes more than 125 military and civilian institutions, exclusive of nearly 60 ordinary military training centres. They are turning out maintenance men for the iron-cavalry, wheeled infantry, truck- and tractor-drawn artillery at an average rate of 20,000 a year.

Their task was made more formidable by the fact that the percentage of skilled men who were enlisting in 1940 was not high—not nearly as high as the 18 per cent and 19 per cent required. Swiftly growing war industries were absorbing almost all surplus skilled labor. In addition, industry was just emerging from a series of bad years when the training and graduation of apprentices had been at low ebb. Nor was it merely a case of finding men for a few specific trades. There are more than 150 different types of specialists employed in the new Canadian Army.

ARMoured TRADESMEN

In an armoured division alone, are found the following craftsmen, exclusive of hundreds of drivers, gunners and radio operators—wireless, anti-aircraft and instrument mechanics, blacksmiths, brick-layers, compositors, tinmiths, saddlers, machinists, masons, plumbers, sawyers, wheelers, carpenters, electricians and linemen, draughtsmen, surveyors, acetylene and electric welders, engine artificers, pharmacists and laboratory assistants, camofleurs, gunsmiths and armorers, plus the usual complement of clerks, tailors and cooks.

The great bulk of the demand for skilled men in the new army comes, of course, from the huge mass of about 18,000 vehicles with which the Canadian Army overseas, as constituted at the end of the year, will be equipped. (Estimated overseas establishment January 1st, 1942: 1 1/3 armoured; 3 infantry divisions.)

The so-called "ordinary," or orthodox infantry-artillery division actually has more vehicles than the armoured formation (4,000 to 5,000), for if the latter has tanks, armoured cars and tank transporters, the former has many more troop-carrying and general service trucks, artillery tractors, infantry carriers and reconnaissance cars. There are more thousands of headquarters, army and corps troops vehicles. The ordnance troops necessary to maintain such an array of fighting and transport vehicles, all of them under hard usage, can easily be visualized.

CIVILIANS HELP

In meeting the imperative need, the Army has been immensely aided by the provincial Departments of Education and the Canadian Youth Training Centres. Without their invaluable co-operation the problem would have presented much greater difficulty. Instead, the work of establishing, staffing and equipping a wide-spread series of schools for elementary training was almost entirely taken over by civilian institutions and educationalists.

A total of 99 vocational and technical schools and Youth Training Centres now have well over 2,000 military students attending their classes. No city between Nanaimo and Saint John but has one or more elementary army trade-training course, of three-months duration, on subjects ranging from how to make false teeth to how to swing a blacksmith's sledge.

At Hamilton, Ontario, is the key institution of the entire system. The army has dubbed it the "Vocational College"—the Army Trades School—to which the technical school students graduate. Commanded by Col. D. A. White, D.S.O., the Trades School operates classes of 3 to 5 months duration according to trade. The syllabus is in the hands of 175 thoroughly trained and qualified instructors, turned soldiers, who have been assisted by automotive experts and leading educationalists loaned by the Ontario government. Nearly 2,000 youths are in training and it is certain that a great proportion are also learning a trade which will be invaluable in civilian life after applying their knowledge to the mobile army's needs.

ADVANCED TRAINING

Trade-training of the recruit for the Army's tanks, carriers, jeeps, armoured and reconnaissance cars, troop transports and tractors, and great armadas of trucks and trailers, does not stop with the civilian technical school and the Army "Vocational College" courses. Even before the soldier-students began their trade-training, they had already taken two months instruction in a Basic Training Centre in the fundamentals of soldiering and the array of weapons used by the infantry, and now they go to an advanced training centre of their particular arm.

This final phase of instruction is practicing all they have learned in the trade schools with actual army tools on army vehicles. All technical corps such as Ordnance and Engineers have their experts in senior posts, but the students of the army trade-schools make up the bulk of the mechanical staffs at both forward and rear depots and machine shops.

In addition, the ranks of the expert army mechanics are swelled by subsidiary advanced courses in industrial establishments and advanced army schools.

INDUSTRIAL CLASSES

Continuous automotive classes are operated for the Army in the plants of Ford Motor, Chrysler Corporation, General Motors, International Harvester (13 plants) and Labatt's, and a special infantry carrier course is being given by Ford. A pulp company is training diesel mechanics for the tanks, and nine major construction companies are training army engineers. Nearly 300 officers and men are also in the United States taking mechanics, motorcycle and motor mechanics.

Two unique schools are also in operation by old branches of the Army which have suddenly taken on new importance and meaning with the coming of full army mechanization.

The Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, which must now fuel the Army as well as feed it, is ensuring that nations will always arrive up-the-line by operating a driving and maintenance school at Woodstock, Ontario. Trucks and lorries are given a gruelling testing, and the drivers have hair-raising adventures. When they qualify at Woodstock as expert army "wheelers" they can take a truck over terrain and obstacles that would make civilian truckers blench.

GREAT DEFENDENCE

The Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps has also leaped into new importance and prominence with mechanization. Almost solidly composed of tradesmen, the Ordnance Corps is operating an advanced diesel and motor mechanics course at London, Ont. Even the freshmen are frequently experienced garagemen, and graduates, when they proceed to the maintenance units, will be able to operate, service, maintain and repair any type of military truck or wheeled vehicle. They will be their corps' mechanical trouble-shooters, trained to handle any possible job in a base workshop or field lorry repair unit.

It is true that the lads in the jaunty black berets of the Armoured Corps have stolen a great share of the spectacular attributes of their job. But it is the men in the oil-stained monkey-suits who live, laugh and labour amid the reek of gasoline fumes and clangour of the field workshops, who hold the fate of a mechanized army in their capable hands. The very essence of successful blitz tactics is movement, and it is the soldier-tradesmen who must keep their army moving.

The soldierly satisfaction in that imperative work is great, and the attractiveness of service in the mechanical section of any corps is enhanced by the fact that such Canadian citizen-soldiers are perfecting a civilian trade while they fight.

Each year, on the second Monday in February, there is much waiting and gnashing of teeth around Wainwright. That's the day on which our municipal elections are held. It is also the day on which people who have "lived here for years" find that they are not on the voters' list and in consequence town officials and election officers are accused, either openly or sub rosa, of conspiracy to deprive eligible voters of their franchise. A little trouble at this time of year may save much grief later on, and a clear understanding of the regulations will give everyone who is entitled the chance to vote.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found an advertisement, inserted by the Town Council, setting forth the procedure necessary to insure the placing on the voters' list of all the names which are legally entitled to appear thereon. However, since the legal phraseology of this advertisement may be somewhat confusing to some of our readers, we give a brief resume of the regulations covering this important matter.

If your name was on the last revised assessment roll of the town (that is, if you were assessed for taxes in the year 1941) your name will automatically appear on the voters' list and no further action will be necessary. However, the wife, husband, father, mother and each son and daughter (if over the age of 21 years) of an assessed property owner is also entitled to vote, but in order to secure the franchise these persons MUST register with the Secretary, Treasurer of the Town during the months of September and October.

If you are a tenant, renting an assessed parcel or portion of an assessed parcel, for at least 12 months prior to August 1st, 1940, you are entitled to vote ONLY if you have registered. You must register during the months of September and October.

If you are the wife, husband, father, mother, son or daughter of a tenant who is registered as above, you are entitled to vote also, but ONLY if you have registered. You MUST register during the months of September and October.

Persons desiring to register must obtain forms from the Town Secretary and then appear before a commissioner for and have the form duly signed.

To summarize: If you have been assessed this year, your name will automatically appear on the voters' list. If you are a close relative of an assessed property owner, or if you are a tenant or a close relative of a tenant, you are entitled to vote ONLY if you have registered during the months of September or October, 1941.

Remember, it's up to YOU to see that your name appears on the voters' list. Don't wait until next February to find out that your name does not appear—Register NOW and save regrets.

Associate Editor of the "Edmonton Bulletin" and author of the daily column "From the News."

Determined if not wholly successful Axis attacks on British and American shipping during the days since President Roosevelt's "shoot at sight" order to the United States navy in the Baltic have been launched in the Atlantic.

The first German attack on a British convoy was launched two days after the President's speech.

While the full results of the attack were not announced it is indicated that there had been losses on both sides. The British undoubtedly scored hits on one or more of the pack of U-boats which attacked the convoy.

Puppet governments, subject to German administration are not being formed in the Baltic whose people now long ago welcomed the Nazis as "liberators" and dispatch to the Neue Zürcher Zeitung reports the establishment of a five man council for Estonia at the "direction" of German officials.

Perhaps it is symbolic that the members of the new council, drawn from the Estonian Fascist organization.

TREASURY BRANCH LOANS

Dear Sir:—A very interesting news item appeared in the Journal a few nights ago, but which may have escaped the attention of many of your readers. The item stated that $44,635 had been loaned to farmers throughout Alberta by the treasury branches.

The most striking feature of these loans was the rate of interest charged, which, according to Mr. A. K. Olive, superintendent of the treasury branches, was six per cent and was "based on administrative costs." Surely this is a far cry from the interest-free loans so freely promised to the harassed farmers by Social Credit candidates before and during the election campaign of 1936! We distinctly recall the attacks which were made upon the banks and other lending institutions in connection with interest charges, and which were denounced as usury.

Now, however, we find that the treasury branches are following the very practice which was so fervently condemned, and the plea is now made that loans cannot be made for less as the rate is based upon administrative costs. Has the government finally realized that facts are more potent than theories, or is the conclusion to be forced upon the public that interest is an evil only when it is extracted by some one other than the government?

Yours,
J. PERCY PAGE,
Secretary, Independent Group.

Latvia still has only a general council, headed by Gen. Petras Kiliulis, former chief of the general staff, with purely advisory powers to German Commissioner Von Rintelen. Latvia Nazis are not represented and the newspaper hints that the council may be dissolved.

Lithuania has no resemblance of administration other than that of the Nazis conquerors and is subject to the directions of Gauleiter Loss, Reich commissar for the entire Baltic area. Those reported to have been keenest in the Latvia revolution, organized with the aid of Latvian officials who fled before the Russian invaders last year, assisted the Germans to take the country in a relatively undamaged condition compared with the damage inflicted by the severe fighting in neighboring regions.

Perhaps these revolutionists received no formal promises from the Germans but their hopes were high for independence. These hopes now seem to have disappeared. Dispatches from the Baltic indicate that that region suffered keenly under its year of Russian rule and would have quickly agreed to even liquidation of economic and trade arrangements with the Nazis in return for a semblance of freedom. Their liberation now seems further removed than ever.

Some suggestions are heard that America represents the last hope for the Baltic states. Some forecast the formation of a Baltic bloc, including Finland, as a buffer between Russia and Europe in an event of an Allied victory. The Atlantic charter's eight point program has contributed to Baltic hopes. It is reported.

Indications of continued Czech resistance is seen in the announcement that 16 staff members of two illegal publications have been condemned by the Volksgericht (Peoples court) in Berlin to sentences ranging from death to a minimum of five years imprisonment.

Der Neue Tag, German language Prague newspaper, said in a brief of editorial comment only that the accused were guilty of planning "high treason" through preparations to publish a magazine and a newspaper. Josef Skalska, listed as a Prague police official was sentenced to execution. Two others were sentenced to life imprisonment, two to 15 years three (including a bank president, Jaroslav Strastnicka) to 12 years, and the others to eight, six, and five years. The group includes businessmen, medical students, an engineer and a printer.

Italy sees no possibility, she says, of a break between the Axis powers but rather anticipates fuller cooperation, according to the lead article in Virginia Gayda's Giornale D'Italia.

The comment was provoked by a report (Sept. 19) in the Chicago Daily News that a special mission had been dispatched to America to represent the Italian government in event such a break should occur.

"Italy does not count on a break but much more on a full Axis victory," says the newspaper, which reflects foreign office views. "The spiritual cohesion and community of wills to action has never been so strong as it is now between Italy and Germany, between France and Russia. The Italians are fighting to emerge from the chains of poverty to which British domination condemned them. They know that England's victory would mean the end of their freedom and their hope for a better existence for all classes."

AMONG THE OLD TIMERS

REMINISCENCES OF OTHER DAYS

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO

We are glad to report that Mr. Kenneth Kenny is progressing favorably after a complicated appendix operation in the city.

A pleasant evening was spent on Friday when members of St. Andrews gathered in the church to bid farewell to Rev. C. J. Mackay who has been their pastor for the past year.

Mr. J. Habbirk and Art Scofield both left for the city on Monday where they will attend University.

Mr. A. K. Whiston, the Supervisor of Municipal Hospitals for Alberta is in town in connection with the taking of the vote on Saturday next on the Wainwright Hospital scheme.

Mrs. Jack Stinner and children are preparing for a trip to her old home in the East, according to information on hand.

We learn that Messrs Fred Perkins and E. Davidson have bought a new threshing outfit and are now busy with their new machine.

Mrs. Hugh Wolfe has now returned here and is residing in town.

EDGERTON

A farewell gathering for Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Kelly and family was held in Pawsey's hall on Tuesday evening, September 23rd. Quite a large number attended, both from town and surrounding districts, resulting in a very pleasant time to all concerned, with the majority "tripping the light fantastic." Following an early supper dance, a presentation was made to the popular couple, with P. S. P. doing the honors.

The gifts consisted of a silver tea service to Mrs. Kelly, and a swanky-looking golf bag to Harry, who responded for both—very ably and amusingly—in spite of his protestations to the contrary.

After a stay of 16 years in our midst, a wide circle of friends and acquaintances will certainly miss the Kelly family, both from a business point of view, and socially. We join in wishing them the very best of success and happiness in their new life at Ponoka. They left for that point last Monday.

The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Pawsey was filled to capacity last Wednesday evening when another departing citizen was given a "hurry up" party. This time it was Terry Kluck, who, owing to unexpected change of plans, left on Thursday for his new home and business at Provost.

Due to the change in plans, no presentation was made at the party, but it is understood that a gift will be forwarded as soon as possible. C. G. Welch was the impromptu orator in this case, and he voiced the regrets of all assembled at Jerry's impending departure, and wishing him and his wife—who is visiting a Edmonton—a most happy and prosperous future.

E. L. Darby, our new druggist, arrived early last week and was quickly installed in the very well-appointed business. His wife and small son followed soon after, and we are glad to hear that they think they are going to be quite content here. It is to be hoped nothing will make them change that opinion, and a very hearty welcome is extended to them.

Departures seem to be reaching the epidemic stage, for Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Challenger have decided to move to the coast, and on Saturday last had a sale which drew a very large crowd. It is believed that all concerned are satisfied with the proceeds.

Mrs. Clair Johnston and children "pulled stakes" Thursday last and moved to Edmonton in order to be near Clair who is stationed at that point with the R.C.A.F.

Miss Mildred Aasen left on Friday for Peterborough, Ont., where she will attend St. Joseph's school of nursing. Mildred has for some time been on the Co-op staff and if she is as good at nursing as she was behind the counter, she should go far. All who came in contact with her wish her the very best of luck in her new venture.

The ladies of St. Mary's W.A. (Anglican) reaped the benefit of Harvey Challenger's sale last Saturday when their bean supper in the Church basement was thronged with hungry folk craving food—and getting it. We understand that all concerned are well pleased with the results of their labors.

Sharp frosts last week stripped the country-side of its gorgeous Autumnal coloring, and the prospect of looking at naked trees for the next several months is a doubtful one to say the least, but, considering all the other privileges we should be grateful that we are where we are.

J. F. Gilmour left on Monday for Calgary where he will attend a Bankers' Conference.

We regret to report that Jack Evans has been quite ill for several days, at time of writing it is understood that he is holding his own, and improvement hoped for.

Canada At War

revolver, protection against gas, driving of wheeled tracked vehicles as well as tactical exercises. There are 26 of these advanced training centres across Canada. The editors saw them in action at Camp Borden, Petawawa and Valcartier.

Meanwhile another very important role in moulding Canada's new army is being carried out at the Army Trades School in Hamilton, where soldiers learn the trades associated with mechanized equipment. An entirely new development of this war, this school is but one phase of the huge trades-training program aimed at providing skilled and semi-skilled tradesmen for the Canadian Army, which is now completely motorized and which has armored regiments and tank battalions as its striking weapons. For example, all students of the Army Trades School first attended one of the 99 Canadian Technical Schools. They were also first trained in the fundamentals of soldiering at a Basic Training Centre. At present, there are about 1,300 students at the Hamilton school with an ultimate capacity of 2,000. Their periods of instruction range from three to five months, depending on the character of their trade. These include such trades as artillery artificers, carpenters and joiners, electricians, engine artificers, motor vehicle fitters, instrument and wireless mechanics. These are only a few of the 150 types of tradesmen in the modern army.

A large staff of instructors is required on the four main departments which are: Automotive, Electrical, Machine and Fitting, and Carpentry. In addition there are facilities for draughting, blacksmithing welding and sheet metal work.

What about Junior Officers (subalterns) for the Canadian Army, of which it is estimated that nearly 6,000 will be required in the next year? They will be provided through Officers' Training Centres established at Brockville, Ont., and Victoria, B.C. If the course of training seen by the editors' party at Brockville is any criterion, the Army's new officers will be fit in every way to meet any possible emergency. The course is strenuous, one of the most physically demanding a high standard of physical fitness. For the first month's course the potential officers undergo training common to all arms, including squad and rifle drill, protection against gas, motor mechanics, motor cycle riding and trench-digging. They then receive advanced instruction in their particular arm. It is a strict rule now, a lesson from the last war, that officers must come up from the ranks. Candidates for commissions must have served either four months in an active formation or for one year with a Reserve unit. They may then be recommended to go to Brockville by their Commanding Officer. About 1,300 men are now in training at Brockville with one-third of that number being graduated each month.

Such is the gigantic training scheme for Canada's new army, now in full operation across the far-flung Dominion. We have described only what we have found in Eastern Canada. Its counterpart will be found in the West as well. There is no gain-saying the fact that the complicated arms and machines of modern war require close application and concentrated study. The old days of constant squad and rifle drill and route marches are gone. During our whole tour we saw only one band. There is little time for music in this war. It is study, study, study, day and night. Canada's army is being whipped into shape by long, hard hours of grinding on the part of instructors and pupils. Naturally it tends to become monotonous and grueling is inevitable, but in the course of many talks with both officers and men, we hear few serious complaints other than the expression of a general desire to be on the way overseas. Month after month at Borden, Petawawa and Deseronto to become tireless, to put it mildly. It was the same at Valcartier where the French-Canadians were chafing at inaction and anxious to be on their way. They realize, however, that their hour will come and when it does, they will be thoroughly trained and supremely prepared to strike and strike hard. As Canada's army training plan swings into high gear, we may look forward to the traditions of 1914-18.

UNITED GRAIN GROWERS ADVOCATE COST OF LIVING BONUS TO FARMERS

R. S. Law, President of United Grain Growers Limited, under date of September 19th, 1941, issued a statement on behalf of the Directors of that Company advocating a payment on the acreage of wheat to farmers, comparable to the cost of living bonus, to compensate farmers for increased costs prevailing this year and to remedy the deficiency in western farm income. The statement is as follows:

"It is becoming more evident every day that western wheat income is inadequate for the satisfactory maintenance of agricultural production in western Canada. The situation calls for full government review at the earliest possible moment to bring about an adjustment. Western farmers are suffering not only from reduced production caused by adverse weather conditions and by their compliance with the government plan for wheat acreage reduction; they are suffering from increased costs of living and operation due to the rise of prices in Canada. Adjustment of income is required for exactly the same reasons which have brought about cost of living bonuses in industry and in the Civil Service, and is more urgently required because farmers have to provide not only for cost of living but also for cost of operation.

"There are several possible methods of making such an adjustment. One would be a considerable increase in the basis of 'initial payments' for wheat by the Canadian Wheat Board. The Board of Directors of United Grain Growers Limited advocated such an increase as far back as last January. It now feels it necessary, however, because of subsequent developments, to put forward a suggestion for an alternative basis. One reason is that the Government has now twice refused to make such an increase. Another is that owing to new factors which entered the situation, an increase in Wheat Board payments would only bring the present problem.

"In reviewing the situation the government may properly take into account the fact that in direct payments to supplement farmers' limited income from wheat, it would not interfere with feeding of wheat to live stock. It corresponds in principle to the cost of living bonus given to wage earners. Its benefits are equitably distributed with no discrimination against the farmer whose yields this year were low. It would not require to be applied immediately to be effective, but necessary time could be taken by the government of Canada to study the problem, and possibly to bring the plan before Parliament.

"In putting forward this plan, the Company is showing no lack of sympathy with those who continue to support the plan which it earlier advocated, that of increasing Wheat Board initial payments. Their efforts are based on the same facts as the efforts of this Company, the need of more farm income in western Canada, and the need of government intervention in the situation. To recognize such need is in line with the war effort of Canada, which for maximum effectiveness requires that agriculture be kept functioning efficiently not only to strengthen the Canadian economy but also to insure the maximum production of food for supplying Great Britain.

"For such reasons the Board of Directors of United Grain Growers Limited advocates that there should be paid to each wheat farmer a bonus on his wheat acreage. It should be applied not on the acreage actually seeded to wheat in 1941, but on what is known as his basic wheat acreage.

Good Highways for Alberta

If all money from motor taxes is used for road purposes there will be ample funds to build and maintain an excellent system of motor roads, and also to improve all main highways.

The province is in a hopeless position to ask for a federal aid towards road improvement in the province so long as it is itself diverting to other purposes taxes paid by motorists of the province for road purposes.

An united effort now by citizens, farmers, motorists and the general public of the province, can stop this unsound practice and can insure that at least all the motor taxes raised be expended on the roads of the province.

You are asked to approach your local M.L.A. and to join in pressing for this very necessary reform.

A Short Short Story—

FINAL PARDON...

BY LESLIE HAMILTON

"Look out, sir!" Tim Lawson—who was serving life in a State Prison—warned the guard in charge of a convict working party, hurling himself as he uttered his warning upon a murderous inmate known as "Dutch Wailer," who was charging the official from behind with a deadly-looking pick-axe.

For a few moments there was a terrific struggle, but eventually the guard, helped by other officers who ran to his assistance, managed to overpower Wailer and disarm him, after which they all turned to Lawson, lying still and twisted where he had fallen in the dust of the prison quarry from a blow of the attacker's weapon.

"Looks like Lawson's badly hurt," one of the guards muttered, kneeling beside the injured convict and examining the latter's skull where "Dutch Wailer" had connected with the steel end of the mining tool.

"Poor devil!" another guard shook his head, turning to the man Wailer had intended to attack. "If Lawson had tackled him, it would have been tough and go with you, Dan."

"Let's get him to the hospital F.O. Q.," the other retorted. "Let's of time to talk about it after we get Murphy on the job," referring to the doctor who supervised the hospital within the prison walls.

"And that's just how it happened, sir," Officer Dan concluded his report to the Warden some time later.

"If it hadn't been for Lawson I don't think I'd be alive to tell it. That Wailer devil sure meant business, sir. No fooling!"

"He meant murder, all right!" the other guard corroborated.

"Looks like Lawson deserves a special recommendation to the Parole Board, sir," another officer suggested. "He certainly saved Officer Dan's life—there's no mistake about that!"

"We'll see what can be done about it," the Warden agreed with them. "In the meantime, I've given Doc Murphy instructions to see that Lawson has the best of care. The other matter will go before the board as soon as possible."

"How'd you come along, Tim?" Officer Dan smiled at Lawson in the hospital a few days later, slipping a few packages of "father-made" cigarettes under the pillow of the patient.

"I think I'm getting along all right now, sir," Lawson answered with a feeble grin. "The doctor sure did a swell job of sewing my head up, and he's looking after me like a hen with her first chick into the bargain, so I guess I'll be okay."

"He'd better," the guard laughed, peering at a tray of empty dishes and remarking: "I see Doc passed the right word along to the kitchen. How's the grub? Any complaints?"

"It's 'A' number one, sir, except that it's a bit light. When can I have something a bit substantial?"

"What's on your mind, Tim?" A nice big, juicy steak smothered in onions?

"I think I'd eat the plate, too," Lawson snatched his lips in anticipation of such a treat. "It's over five years since I had one."

As soon as it's okay with the Doc, you can have a dozen. Officer Dan replied, leaning over the patient and adding in a whispered undertone: "Keep your chin up, Lawson. The chairman of the Parole Board is taking your case up with the Governor. We're trying to get you a pardon; but mum's the word. You understand?"

"Gee... that would be swell!" the convict sighed, a note of new hope in his voice. "I sure..."

"Sorry to interrupt, Dan, but that's all for to-day," Doc Murphy good-naturedly terminated the visit. He's still pretty weak yet, you know. That was a nasty blow and could have finished him off quite easily," indicated Lawson with an inclination of the head as he ushered the guard into the outside corridor of the ward.

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Lawson," the Warden greeted Tim's mother about a week later. "I'm very happy to advise that your son will be able to leave the hospital in a few days. He's coming along quite nicely, according to Doctor Murphy's report, so there isn't anything for you to worry about."

"Oh... I'm so glad to hear that! He'll be quite all right... in his mind, I mean?" It wasn't injured by the blow?"

"Not in the least," came the reassuring answer. "He'll be as right as rain in another week or so."

"Thank God for that!"

"Do you think that you can arrange for some of your friends to give Tim a job?" the kindly Warden broke the ice Lawson's possible release.

"You mean—outside?" his mother gasped in astonishment.

"Yes, that's exactly what I do mean," the official smiled in reply. We've checked up on your son's past history pretty thoroughly, and he seems to have been the victim of bad company, and not viciously inclined at all. In view of all the circumstances, therefore, the Warden continued, "and the fact that Lawson was never in trouble before, the Parole Board has recommended to the Governor that we release him on six months' probation. If Tim sticks to a decent job and behaves himself, the chances are that the Governor will grant him a full and final pardon in recognition of your son's help when Officer Dan was attacked."

"Wouldn't that be grand!" Mrs. Lawson breathed in joyful ecstasy, tears of happiness trickling down her cheeks as she realized the full import of what the Warden's promise implied.

"As you have had to come a long way to see Tim," the official went on, "I've arranged for you to stay for a few days, if you care. Officer Dan and his wife have a spare room in their cottage and would like to have you as their guest; that is, if you would care to accept their hospitality?"

"You're very kind, Warden. I should like to stay very much—that is, if you're sure it isn't too much trouble for all concerned."

"Glad to show we can appreciate a good deed," the Warden patted her shoulder, introducing an officer who had been waiting to escort the joyful woman to the hospital for a visit with her son.

"Boom... Boom... Boom!" the clock on the gun-tower above the main gates of the prison reverberated through the fog of a misty morning.

"That's the signal for the morning roll call," a shrouded figure whispered to another silhouette in the hospital ward, as the echoes of the huge bell grew fainter and fainter, and finally melted into the drab stillness of the murky morning.

"For crissake sake don't wake Lawson!" whispered a third shadow, sliding from a bed and following in the wake of the other two.

"I'd like to crack the rat," the first figure, who appeared to be the leader of the trio, snarled at his fellow convicts crouched by the door of the ward.

"Sh! Here comes the 'screw.' Soak 'im a good one, shortly!"

"Halt—you! Where'd you think you are going?" an alert gun-bull called to the three as they began to move the prison wall shortly afterwards.

"Bang—Bang—Bang!" a gun spat viciously as the first figure dropped over the wall. Ooeeeee! Ooeeeee! the prison siren screamed the alarm of an escape, followed by a regular clamor and flashing searchlights probing the mist as the guards rushed from the tower and began blasting away at the runner who was heading for the bay.

"Cart these two to the morgue," Captain Hartell commanded the night staff after the "break" was halted, pointing to the two who were shot while trying to climb the wall.

"Better check the hospital, Captain," one of the men suddenly remembered Tim Lawson in the general ward from where the escape was planned and started. "Those fellows might have done 'im in for spite before trying to make a getaway."

"Is Lawson all right?" Officer Dan grabbed Doc Murphy by the arm as soon as they reached the hospital ward.

"They didn't touch him—if that's what you mean," the doctor answered softly, drawing the sheet over his patient, who lay strangely quiet and still under the covers. "But the excitement and hubbalooboo was too much for him, I guess. He died of heart failure a few minutes ago."

"So Lawson's pardon has been issued by a higher Judge," the Warden commented when they told him what had happened. "May God in His infinite mercy be more charitable than a selfish world has been," the official concluded, marking Lawson's record card: Finally pardoned—by the King of Kings.

TIMELY HINTS

"Summer has left me with a load of troubles. What is the remedy?" Bathing the face in buttermilk is a mild treatment that often produces results. If it fails, get this solution made up for you: two ounces with castile, one ounce peroxide, one ounce Cologne water, one ounce glycerine, four ounces rose water. Shake well. Apply solution with clean absorbent cotton, patting lotion lightly. Allow to dry on the skin.

"War work keeps me busy, and I've little time for make-up. Can you advise a makeup that is simple and yet effective?"

Your problem is becoming increasingly common. Happily, I have the very thing for you. Try the new makeup using purpose cream as its base, and powder, rouge and lipstick to match. The cream serves as a cleanser, foundation base and tissue cream. At night, massage the cream well into the skin. I'll be glad to send you a makeup chart, if you'll drop me a line.

"How can one keep fresh and dainty? I find this a problem even in the cold months, as I dance a good deal."

Too many people overlook this point and are avoided by others. Everybody perceives it is a natural function of the body. Wash yourself often, using gentle palmolive soap because it cleanses thoroughly and also helps to beautify the skin. For special occasions, dab a little deodorant cream under the armpits.

My booklet on Beauty care will help you with your beautifying. Send four one-cent stamps for your copy, and ask about your personal problems. Address, Miss Barbara Lynn, Box 75, Station B, Montreal, Que.

THE DIAL REVIEW

by Walter Dales

Do you like good old-fashioned music . . . the real low-down hoodoon?
Then let me suggest that you listen to "The Homesteaders", a half hour of your favorite type of music featuring the Fields and Hall Mount-eers, Red River Dave, the Jimmy Wasky Trio and others of your ina oris radio entertainers. Be sure that you don't miss "The Homesteaders" every Saturday night at nine o'clock.

Sandra Michael, author of "Against the Storm", is in a dither, but also is producer, director and cast. Miss Michael, who recently underwent an emergency operation, usually keeps scripts three weeks in advance, but due to her illness, is now only two days ahead.

It became known last week that Bing Crosby, still vacationing from his radio hour, had quietly and secretly slipped aboard an unnamed boat bound for South America, where he and his brother, Larry, will engage in a bit of horse trading and buying in the Argentine.

Members of the "Lux Radio Theatre" audience, heard every Monday evening at 7, will take part in a patriotic salute after each broadcast this season. With studio lights off and a spotlight on an American flag, musical director Lou Silvers will lead the 1,300 studio guests in the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner." It is not part of the broadcast.

Edward G. Robinson, when he returns to the airwaves in October with "Big Town," will see that his dramas contain more comedy and are lighter in flavor. He made his decision following questioning young cadet friends of his son, Manny, in summer camp of the Black-Foxe Military Academy. How Robinson will make his cop-chasing-robbler series lighter he did not explain.

Another member of CICA's radio family to have been invaded by throat infection is Don Quinn, writer of "Fibber McGee" programs, who took time off for a tonsillectomy prior to the resumption of that series on September 30th.

RADIOBRIEFS — Harlow Wilcox, announcer on the "Hap Hazard" programs, gave up polo because it interfered with his radio work: Bill Hay, announcer for the "Amos 'n' Andy" programs, is an enthusiastic member of a lawn bowling club in Beverly Hills, Una Munson, of the "Big Town" programs, is one of the few women squash players in Hollywood, Cecil B. DeMille, now producer of the "Lux Radio Theatre," used the first artificial light in Hollywood.
And that is "30" for another week.
